Future leaders in healthcare need to be prepared for the evolving healthcare industry to address the fluctuating challenges and needs of the American population and healthcare system.

Employment areas range widely across health care and public policy sectors, including long-term care, home health care, behavioral health, urgent care, hospital and community health, hospice, non-profits, insurance, government, finance and research.