In response to growing rates of childhood obesity, a number of federal, state, and local campaigns have been established to encourage young people to be physically active. As more emphasis is placed on the importance of exercise, more recreation workers will be needed to work in local government parks, recreation departments and camps specializing in younger participants. Job prospects are particularly favorable for those with an additional focus in social work sectors including mental health and substance use.