| Signatures below attest to an agreement between instructor and student regarding assignments required to successfully satisfy honors designation for the course. The aim of the Honors designation is that the student engage with the course material on a deeper level. The faculty member should think of the student as a mentee, and the student should expect to take an exceptionally active role in the course. Often Honors designations add research to courses that normally don't require it, or link the course material with another discipline. The focus should be on enriching the learning experience, so that students are able to deepen their connection with the course material. Honors work may be in addition to and/or in place of the syllabus requirements. https://www.unh.edu/honors-program/designating-course-honors. |                         |  |          |
