Employment growth will be driven by increased demand for health care and social services, but will vary by social worker specialty. Areas of most significant growth include health care, mental health, and substance use. Industries with the highest level of employment include local, state, and federal government; individual and family services; hospitals; health practitioner offices; and community and relief services.

Where Are They Now?